The Executive and Planning Committee of the California Judicial Council is soliciting nominations to fill vacancies on the Judicial Council and its advisory committees and on the Legal Services Trust Fund Commission.

The Judicial Council is the policy-setting body of the state courts. It has the responsibility to set the direction and provide the leadership for improving the quality of the California judicial system and advancing the consistent, independent, impartial, and accessible administration of justice. Advisory committees help the council to fulfill its responsibility by apprising it of issues and concerns that confront the judicial system and by suggesting solutions and responses.

Judicial Council Vacancies

For the three-year term commencing September 15, 2001, nominations are sought to fill voting positions on the council for an appellate court justice and three superior court judges.

Nonvoting vacancies on the council have not been included in this solicitation. In the near future, a solicitation for those vacancies will be sent to the specific groups involved.

Judicial Council Membership, Responsibilities, and Time Commitment

Terms of service for voting members of the Judicial Council are three years. Members attend approximately 8 one- to three-day council meetings per year. Each member is also appointed to an internal committee of the council, which requires participation in an additional 15 to 25 committee meetings per year (in person or by phone). Current members estimate that, in addition to attending meetings, they spend three to four days per month on council-related tasks.

The Chief Justice appoints council members according to positions prescribed in the California Constitution and California Rules of Court. Prior service on Judicial Council advisory committees is desirable. Some advisory members are nominated or selected by certain groups or organizations. A description of the council's mission, guiding principles, membership, and terms appears in California Rules of Court (Title Six, Judicial Administration Rules), rules 6.1 through 6.13. Additional information about the function and membership of the council can be found in article VI of the California Constitution.

Committee Vacancies

The Chief Justice appoints advisory committee members according to positions or categories prescribed by the California Rules of Court and by statute. Positions vary according to the focus of the committee. For example, the Family and Juvenile Law Advisory Committee includes the categories of CASA director and children's rights attorney; the Appellate Advisory Committee includes the categories of appellate justice and trial court judge with appellate experience.

Annually, approximately 80 people are appointed to advisory committees. The 2001 Advisory Committee Nomination Form lists the positions for which nominations are being solicited in this cycle.

Advisory Committee Responsibilities and Time Commitment

The council's advisory committees regularly monitor certain topics, areas of law, and segments of the judiciary and comment to the council on identified issues. Each committee reviews and makes recommendations on legislation, rules, standards, and forms within its purview. Committee membership requires a commitment of 10 hours per month on average but may vary considerably from month to month, depending on the projects under way. Committees meet in person 4 to 10 times per year and by telephone conference 5 to 18 times per year.

Terms of service for advisory committee members are generally three years in duration, although some committees' terms are for only one or two years. Terms of service for those appointed in this nomination cycle will begin November 1, 2001. For a description of the membership, terms, functions, and duties of advisory committees, see California Rules of Court, rules 6.30 through 6.55.

How to Apply

Complete a nomination form, attach a biography or curriculum vitae no longer than two pages, and return these by May 31 (Judicial Council) or June 29 (advisory committee/commission) to:
